

E-PORTFOLIO IN THE "TRANSFORMATION" MODULE

As of 07/2025

→ Dr Laura Picht-Wiggering

EXAMINATION FORMAT

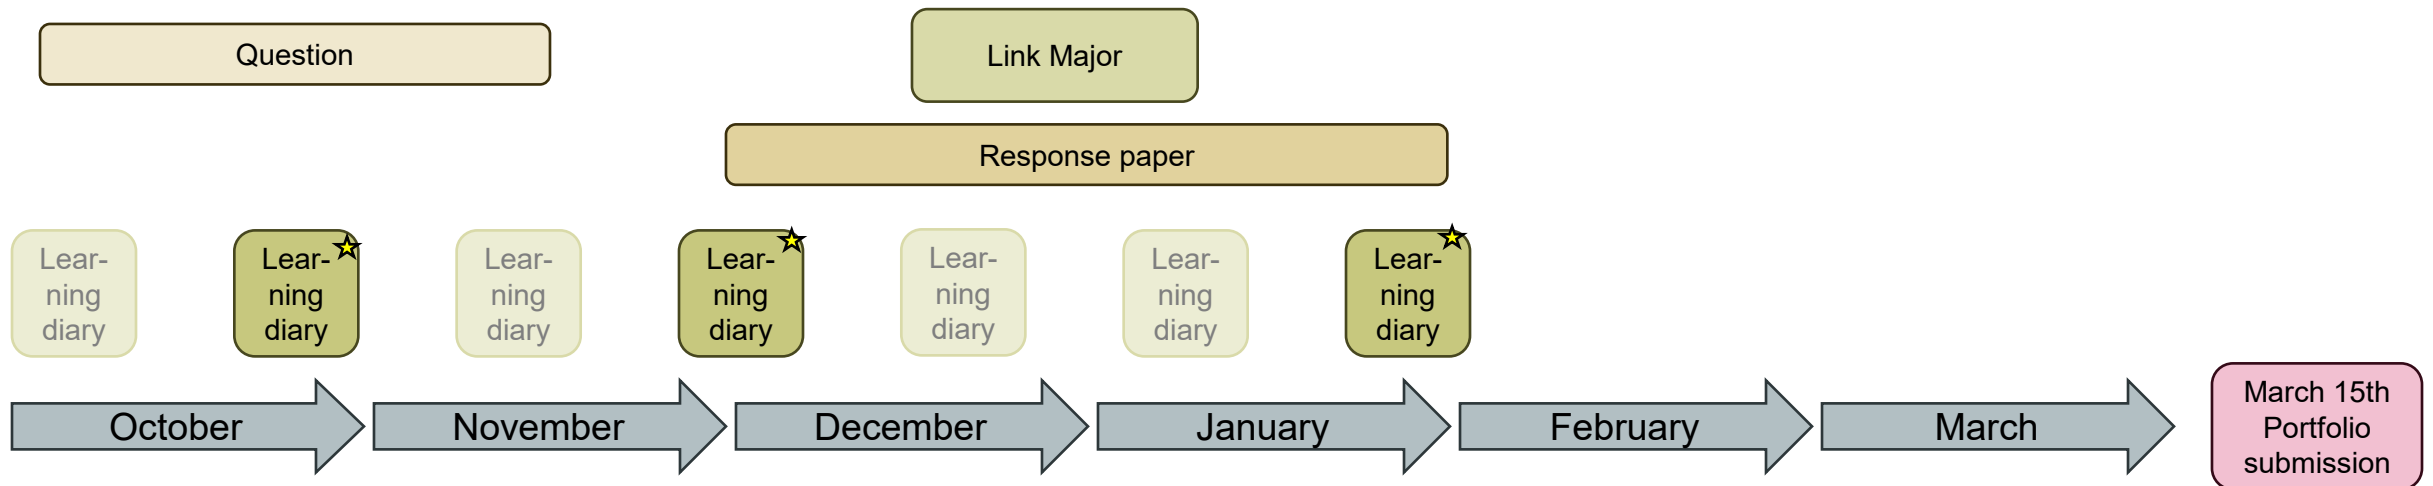

★ The learning diary entries selected here are only examples. You are free to decide which ones to submit.

The portfolio compiled during the exercises forms part of the overall assessment for the module in the form of a combined academic paper. The other two parts are written during the seminar and consist of a presentation during the conference week and an accompanying paper. The portfolio accounts for 35% of the assessment.

You will write four artefacts dealing with academic work and their own studies:

- ✓ Question and reflection
- ✓ Response paper
- ✓ Linking the module to the major
- ✓ Ongoing learning diary, from which 3 reflections are submitted for assessment.

In order to relieve the burden during the examination period, it is recommended that the artefacts be created during the semester at the times suggested here. The entire portfolio must be submitted by March 15th 2026.

ARTEFACTS: SCIENTIFIC WORK

QUESTION + REFLECTION (1-2 PAGES)

- a) Develop your own question based on the context of the exercise.
- b) Reflect on how you arrived at your question:
 - First, describe your approach: How did you go about finding the topic? What strategies did you use to narrow it down? How did you arrive at your question? In a second step, consider what this approach did for you: What worked well? What was challenging?
 - Think about your seminar: Which of the experiences and approaches from the exercise can you apply there? Where might obstacles arise?
 - Think about the future: In your studies, you will also have to find a topic and define a question in other courses. What have you learned from your experiences in this course? What would you like to do again? What might you do differently?

RESPONSE PAPER (4-6 PAGES)

Sub-points a-c of this artefact can also be combined or worked on in a different order.

- a) Identify the central theses from a text and formulate them in your own words, but also quote relevant passages from the text to make your results comprehensible.
- b) Now place these theses in a broader context by finding 1-2 supporting, but possibly also opposing, positions in the literature.
 - Also contextualise the text by obtaining more detailed information (school of thought, disciplinary background, historical classification, biographical data) about the authors. What position could be associated with the text on this basis? What is the target audience of the text (scientific community or more)? What influence does this have on the text's line of argumentation?
- c) Take a position and argue why you agree or disagree with the theses.
- d) Then reflect on your approach:
 - First, describe: What specific steps did you take to identify the theses? How did you contextualise the text? What thought processes did you use to position yourself?
 - Now evaluate: What worked well, and where were the challenges?
 - Think about the future: Which of these experiences can you take with you for your further studies and why? What would you do differently next time?

ARTEFACTS: LEARNING REFLECTION

LINK BETWEEN MAJOR AND MODULE (1-2 PAGES)

- a) Reflect on possible connections between your major and the transformation module or, if you are studying to become a teacher, between the teaching profession or one of your subjects and the transformation module, and describe possible points of contact. Keep in mind that these points of contact can relate to content, but also to procedures or work and learning strategies.
- b) Pick out one of the aspects described. Explain why this point is particularly important or interesting to you. Feel free to draw on your existing knowledge and experience.
- c) Now consider how the content of the module can enrich your view of typical questions in your major or teaching subject.

LEARNING DIARY (3 ENTRIES)

- a) Reflect at regular intervals (at least every two weeks) on what you have learned in the module. This can relate to both content and processes and should consider all three teaching formats (lecture, seminar and exercise) and, if possible, link them together. These reflections should be 0.5–1 page long. Submit three of the reflections for evaluation.
- b) Use the following questions as a guide for your reflections:
 - Where do you currently see overlaps in content between two or three of the teaching formats? Did the content of one of the teaching formats contribute to new insights in the other teaching formats?
 - Were there any surprising insights that changed your thinking or behaviour?
 - Were there any learning moments that you consider particularly valuable for your further studies or for your own development?
 - What observations can you make about your own learning and work? Are there any changes compared to before? Can you explain why?
- a) Justify your selection: What makes these three reflections special? Also place them in the context of your entire reflection process: How did you proceed? When did you reflect? Were there places where you found it particularly easy to reflect? Did you notice any changes over the course of the semester?
- b) Reflect on your learning process in the module: Which content has particularly stuck in your memory? Which methods and working techniques were particularly helpful?
 - In a second step, ask yourself: Why is this content important? What have you learned about yourself?
 - In the third step, look ahead again: What content and methods from the module will you take with you for your future studies or personal development?

EVALUATION

Assessment is based on a predefined assessment grid in which the criteria are also precisely defined. No grades are awarded, but instead a score is determined based on the grid, which is then combined with the results from the seminar to produce a grade.

Artefact	Items
Research Question (Artefact 1a)	The research question is precise and related to a specific topic.
Reflections (Artefacts 1b, 2d, 3, and 4)	The writer has carefully considered and deeply engaged with the topic of the respective task. The writer has identified and described one specific situation in the respective reflection. The writer has analyzed this specific situation. The writer relates different learning experiences, for example the current experience to an earlier one. The writer questions previously held assumptions, biases, or The writer has gained valuable new insights. Based on these insights, the writer discusses implications for future actions, thinking, and learning.
Response Paper (Artefact 2a-c)	The writer identifies the main thesis and key arguments of the text. The writer elaborates on these main points and provides references to the text. The writer contextualizes these points by also drawing on high-quality sources. The writer considers relevant contextual information, for example historical context, audience, or intellectual tradition. The writer positions themselves vis-a-vis the text and, perhaps, in the debate to which the text contributes. The writer supports this position with reasonable arguments. The writer's diction, tone, and style is appropriate for an academic audience.

Entire Portfolio	It is easy to read the text and to understand the writer's reasoning and position. The writer has carefully marked references to other texts as such and clearly attributed ideas to others. It is always obvious who is "speaking" and whose positions--the writer's, those of others--are discussed in the artifact. References to other sources are formatted correctly and consistently; full bibliographic information is provided in the list of works cited. The writer has structured the content and organized paragraphs in line with readers' expectations. In terms of grammar, spelling, and punctuation, the portfolio contains 5 = no or very few errors 4 = some errors 3 = several errors. It is possible for readers to follow the writer's explanations without any effort. 2 = many errors, some of them obvious mistakes. It is, at times, difficult for readers to understand what the writer wants to say. 1 = many errors, some of them obvious mistakes. It is very difficult for readers to understand the writer's explanations. 0 = many errors, many of them obvious mistakes. It is impossible for readers to understand what the writer wants to say.
------------------	---

You can award up to five points per item/criterion. Please only award full points.

4-5 = criterion fully met
 2-3 = criterion met for the most part
 1 = criterion met to some extent
 0 = criterion not met

Name (added automatically from the list of parti

0 0 0
 0 0 0

Artefact	Items
Research Question (Artefact 1a)	The research question is precise and related to a specific topic.
Reflections (Artefacts 1b, 2d, 3, and 4)	The writer has carefully considered and deeply engaged with the topic of the respective task. The writer has identified and described one specific situation in the respective reflection. The writer has analyzed this specific situation. The writer relates different learning experiences, for example the current experience to an earlier one. The writer questions previously held assumptions, biases, or The writer has gained valuable new insights. Based on these insights, the writer discusses implications for future actions, thinking, and learning.
Response Paper (Artefact 2a-c)	The writer identifies the main thesis and key arguments of the text. The writer elaborates on these main points and provides references to the text. The writer contextualizes these points by also drawing on high-quality sources. The writer considers relevant contextual information, for example historical context, audience, or intellectual tradition. The writer positions themselves vis-a-vis the text and, perhaps, in the debate to which the text contributes. The writer supports this position with reasonable arguments. The writer's diction, tone, and style is appropriate for an academic audience.
Entire Portfolio	It is easy to read the text and to understand the writer's reasoning and position. The writer has carefully marked references to other texts as such and clearly attributed ideas to others. It is always obvious who is "speaking" and whose positions--the writer's, those of others--are discussed in the artifact. References to other sources are formatted correctly and consistently; full bibliographic information is provided in the list of works cited. The writer has structured the content and organized paragraphs in line with readers' expectations. In terms of grammar, spelling, and punctuation, the portfolio contains 5 = no or very few errors 4 = some errors 3 = several errors. It is possible for readers to follow the writer's explanations without any effort. 2 = many errors, some of them obvious mistakes. It is, at times, difficult for readers to understand what the writer wants to say. 1 = many errors, some of them obvious mistakes. It is very difficult for readers to understand the writer's explanations. 0 = many errors, many of them obvious mistakes. It is impossible for readers to understand what the writer wants to say.	marked references to other texts as such and to others. It is always obvious who is speaking--the writer's, those of others--are discussed in the artifact. References to other sources are formatted correctly and consistently; full bibliographic information is provided in the list of works cited. The content and organized paragraphs in line with readers' expectations. In terms of grammar, spelling, and punctuation, the portfolio contains 5 = no or very few errors 4 = some errors 3 = several errors. It is possible for readers to follow the writer's explanations without any effort. 2 = many errors, some of them obvious mistakes. It is, at times, difficult for readers to understand what the writer wants to say. 1 = many errors, some of them obvious mistakes. It is very difficult for readers to understand the writer's explanations. 0 = many errors, many of them obvious mistakes. It is impossible for readers to understand what the writer wants to say.
Total Score		0	0	0

FORMALIA

- ❖ Templates for the cover page and the declaration of originality can be found in the Moodle course for the lecture.
- ❖ The assignment instructions contain information on the length of the individual artifacts.
- ❖ Please note the following formatting requirements:
 - ❖ Page margins: 2,5cm on the left, 3cm on the right
 - ❖ Paragraph spacing: 1,5 lines
 - ❖ Font: Times New Roman, Calibri or Arial
 - ❖ Font size: 12 pt for Times New Roman und 11 pt for Calibri or Arial
 - ❖ Footnotes: 1 line, font size 10pt
 - ❖ The Pages must be numbered
 - ❖ A header is not necessary.

Leuphana Universität Lüneburg
Modul Transformation
Übung:
Übungsleitung:

Wintersemester 2025/2026

Portfolio im Modul Transformation

Max Mustermann
Beispielstraße 54
12345 Wohnstadt
M.Musterm@leuphana.de

Wirtschafts- und Sozialwissenschaften
Matr.-Nr. 123290902
1. Semester

